We are very pleased to introduce ourselves as members of the EY Foundation's new Youth Advisory Board (YAB).

I'm Adam, I just graduated with a 1st in Computer Science, am a language geek and travel enthusiast. Having experienced adversity, it is imperative for me to help provide opportunities to those in similar situations.

And my name is Yusirat, I'm 18 years old from Glasgow, and I'm very pleased to be a YAB member this year. So far it has been a phenomenal experience to be able to work directly with Trustees and the team, and to develop ideas on how we can make the Foundation more visible and better known across the UK.

It has been amazing to see just how committed the Foundation is to embedding youth voice into all its work over the last reporting year (July 2019 to June 2020), not only through the launch of the YAB, but also a new Ambassador network across the UK.

We are part of a group of young people who are regularly consulted and involved in all aspects of the Foundation's work, from input into the development of new projects, to active involvement in the recruitment and selection of new Board members.

Another way young people have been involved is when over 80 care-experienced young people helped develop a new Care to Employment programme. Based on their feedback, this programme — specifically aimed at helping young people in the care system into work — will feature additional support, such as bursaries for each student. This programme will be launching next year.

With 80% of the young people supported by EY Foundation coming from an ethnic minority background we were really pleased to see accelerated ambition to support racial equality, highlighted by the Black Lives Matter movement. The Foundation went on to launch their 11 race commitments after the end of the reporting year in July 2020.

It has also been an exciting year of growth. The Foundation launched a fourth Hub in the Midlands to expand its presence across the UK. We also secured funding from the Careers & Enterprise Company, the Mercers' Charitable Foundation (for which the Mercers' Company is Corporate Trustee) and the CareTech Foundation to scale up delivery, and from Impetus to support development of the long-term strategic direction. Collaborating with others has also been a focus, which you can read more about later in the report.

Covid-19 created a shift to virtual delivery. In a period of so much uncertainty, it was great to see the Foundation listening to young people and innovating to provide new forms of support, such as online mentoring and employability skills webinars. Online delivery is an area of

We hope you enjoy learning about the impact that has been achieved in the past year.
The challenge we tackle

Major events over the past year have transformed — and will continue to transform — the landscape we work in and the lives and future prospects of our young people.
Click on the numbers for more details.

At the EY Foundation, our ability to bring employers and young people together has never been more important. Action is needed on both sides of the labour market to help young people in poverty overcome the challenges they face to securing quality employment, and we commit to making a significant contribution to achieving this ambition.
Our response to Covid-19

With Covid-19 making face-to-face delivery impossible, we innovated to deliver our programmes virtually. By listening to our young people through our #voiceforyoungpeople social media campaign, we were able to understand their concerns and help them.

As part of our response, we delivered online employability skills training over Easter and launched an online mentoring pilot connecting 72 mentors with 71 young people.

We know that not everyone has easy access to digital learning, so we worked to ensure we could provide laptops to all young people due to take part in our programmes over the summer. Using insights from Easter, we developed 10 fully accredited online programmes, including a virtual work experience placement for each student.

Based on 67 survey respondents

46% were worried about the impact on their schooling and exams

22% were worried about work experience and other opportunities being cancelled

Even in a global pandemic, I’ve gained experience which I could not gain anywhere else, thanks to the EY Foundation.

I really enjoyed my time on the programme and feel like it gave me the confidence I was lacking in the workplace. I managed to secure an Apprenticeship with EY. I don’t think I could have done it without the EY Foundation’s help.

A lot of young people are unsure what to do, the advice and guidance that I received on the EY Foundation programme has been one of the most impactful things in my life. I was successful in getting a job with Taylor Wimpey and I’m not sure where I would be without the help I got.

Our Future

Our Future is a six-month programme for young people qualifying for free school meals who face significant barriers to entering the labour market. This programme develops transferrable skills, and all students receive paid work experience, gain a CMI Level 2 adult qualification and six months of mentoring support.

My biggest challenge was actually travelling to the EY office in Canary Wharf; I’d never been on a train on my own before, especially so far away. My biggest achievement would be completing this programme, I have social anxiety and it was difficult for me to present in front of people but I was really proud of myself when I did it successfully. I made it and I’m much more confident now.

Our increasingly diverse funding mix includes funding from employers, traditional fundraising and new funding partners, such as the Mercers' Charitable Foundation (for which the Mercers' Company is Corporate Trustee) and the Careers & Enterprise Company. Core funding comes from a five-year agreement with EY.

The cost of youth unemployment over the next decade is estimated at around £28bn. Our programmes respond to this challenge by helping employers to recognise the potential of young people, whilst preparing young people better for the world of work.

Collaboration

Collaboration was a key focus this year:

Working with others allows us to contribute to wider, systemic change, and extend our impact to help more young people across the UK.
Lessons learned

Impact reporting not only highlights the success of our work and positive outcomes, it also helps us improve.

- In September 2019, we committed to taking increased action on race as part of our overall diversity and inclusion strategy. The Black Lives Matter movement demonstrated the importance of further accelerating the work we are doing. Our 11 race commitments will shape all aspects of our work over the coming years.

- Increased input from young people such as our YAB has been invaluable; however we will continue to develop the ways in which they can contribute to our work and challenge us.

- The importance of collaboration and learning from our sector peers has grown. Our Impetus partnership has shown that external funders can help us rethink how we best achieve our long-term aims.

- We have learned that as an organisation we can respond to a crisis quickly and innovate our programme delivery to protect opportunities. We must continue to understand from our data who the young people we work with are, and how we can best support them online.

- Lastly, the implications of Covid-19 on our employability workshops will affect the scale of our impact in the coming year. We will have to take this into account.

“Given the current situation, I was quite anxious that I would not get access to opportunities that I was successful in obtaining — thank you for alleviating this stress and running these programmes that I can still learn from.

Amandeep
Smart Futures, Birmingham
Looking to the future

With the fantastic news that we have secured five more years of funding from EY, our focus will now be on the depth of our impact and influence in the wider sector. Over the next year we will focus on securing greater depth in our impact, growing partnerships so we can make the biggest difference and working with new employers to improve opportunities for young people. We will:

- Launch our Care to Employment pilot in the London Borough of Hounslow and further develop our partnership with the CareTech Foundation.

- Launch two new sector-wide employer programmes:
  - Impactful Futures, in partnership with Prospectus, will offer young people opportunities in the non-profit sector.
  - Secure Futures programme, run in partnership with The Security Institute, will introduce a bespoke programme highlighting the variety of careers in the security industry.

- Accelerate the development of our virtual offering in response to Covid-19, with independent research to validate and improve our approach. This will help us to reach more young people across the UK.

- Partnering with Impetus will help to support how we tackle the demand side of the labour market and refine our approach to working with more employers.

- Invest in technology, an area we can build capabilities, and which presents an opportunity to increase our future impact and sustainability.
Thank you and get involved!

We could not deliver any of our work without the willing support of volunteers, fundraisers and partners. A huge thank you to everyone who has supported us in the past year, we really appreciate everything you have done.
